-5% When the hamburger menu is toggled off, the nav bar on a large display disappears

Loving the animation on your nav bar! I would consider starting the highlighted link on your nav bar based on the current page that the user is on. In other words, instead of the highlighted link starting on the home link on each page, have it so that if they're on the About us page, the highlighted link/animation should start there. I would consider adding slightly more detail to each page--your home page looks nice but there's not a whole lot of content rather than just the 4 images

. I'd also add more variety to your upload transaction page, the form should have more than just dropdown options for each entry.
